Summary relayed

The druid we saw in the moonpool is here in the temple. She has been here over a thousand years. When this temple sunk beneath the Anauroch desert she was isolated here along with her 'flock', to preserve them they were sequestered in the infinity circuit, I mean trees beneath us. A few hundred years ago or so, hard to say for certain, the druid performed some dark magic to prolong her ability to protect her 'flock'. She seems to now be some plant/lich/elf tied to the life force of the grove beneath us.

About a 100 years ago or so some outsiders managed to get a foothold here in the temple and taint her mind, through some means they were able to intimately take control of her mind and body. They tainted, and released the souls preserved in the trees, she now wanders the halls broken by her loss.

She is a very old druid who has become some sort of plant based baelnorn. Her mind/soul might be beyond salvation. If we need to fight her we should target the grove she draws life from. But be careful of burning down the deeper temple archives.
